'Militant' War Protest Slated Outside Democratic Convention

By DONALD JANSON
Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Aug. 5—Antiwar groups announced plans today for "militant" demonstrations Aug. 28 outside the Democratic National Convention here.

Rennie Davis, coordinator of the protest for the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, said that more than 100,000 persons would march four miles from the downtown business district to the International Amphitheater at the stockyards for a "massive demonstration and confrontation."

He said that the march would be held on the night the Democrats nominated a candidate for President to focus world attention on the issues of war and racism in the United States.

Opponents of the war will arrive from "all over the country" Aug. 24, he said, for "people's assemblies" in Chicago union halls, churches, parks, beaches and storefronts.

Mr. Davis said that the next day, when convention delegates will arrive, would be devoted to picketing all the major hotels, where delegates were staying to dramatize the issues of war and slum problems.

Open Convention Sought

On Aug. 26, opening day of the convention, numerous rallies will be held, he said, "to demand that the convention be open rather than rigged."

For the benefit of the Credentials Committee, he said, the demonstrators will turn out in support of challenges by the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party and possibly other Negro delegations from the South.

On President Johnson's 60th birthday, Aug. 27, he said, a "birthday party" will be held at the Strawberry Field Pavilion here to reconstruct, in plays and films and other ways, the President's public career.

The Mobilization Committee, an umbrella antiwar group comprising more than 100 peace and civil rights organizations, said in a statement that these dramatizations would include "his first widely questioned election victory, his racist voting record and the slaughter in Vietnam."

David Dellinger, chairman of the Mobilization Committee and editor of Liberation magazine in New York, said demonstrators at the convention hall "won't prevent delegates from going in and out, but we will make our presence dramatically and militantly felt."

12-Hour Shift for Police

The Chicago Police Department has put all its 11,900 men on 12-hour shifts for the week of the convention and made elaborate plans to provide the tightest security ever offered a political convention.

About 1,000 Federal agents will be on hand, and 5,000 National Guardsmen will be on stand-by in Chicago armories and in parks near the convention hall.

Prof. Sidney Peck, sociologist at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland and a co-chairman of the Mobilization Committee, told the news conference, in the Midland Hotel, that Police Superintendent James B. Conlisk had been urged to disarm the police or withdraw them altogether from the demonstration areas.

He said that the demonstrators would be peaceful and were not interested in entering the convention hall or disrupting the convention. Too often, he said, police brutality has turned peaceful marches into riots.

No March Permit

He said that the Justice Department had been asked to determine whether there was a conspiracy among Chicago city and police officials to repress the march and other demonstrations.

"We intend to exercise to the limit our rights to open dissent under the First Amendment," he said.

Mr. Davis said that the committee had no permit for the march but was seeking one. He said that it was also asking the city for permits to use parks for rallies and sleeping space.

But he said that plans would be carried out regardless.

"No denial of a permit is going to prevent the tens of thousands of people who are coming to Chicago from expressing their convictions on these issues," he said.

The committee's most recent major mobilization was a demonstration by some 100,000 persons at the Pentagon last October.

Mr. Dellinger said that among the groups that would be joining in the demonstrations was the Youth International Party (Yippies).

Frank Abbott of New York said at a sidewalk news conference in front of the office of the underground newspaper The Seed yesterday that the Yippies would camp out in Lincoln Park here for a "festival of life" whether or not they were successful in getting a permit to use the park.

Mr. Dellinger said that the demonstrators would back no candidate for President.

"The antiwar movement is going back into the streets and will stay there no matter who the candidate is until United States troops are withdrawn from Vietnam," he said.

Prof. Donald Kalish, a co-chairman of the Mobilization Committee and chairman of the philosophy department at the University of California at Los Angeles, said that the preliminary talks in Paris had failed to "bring us an inch closer to peace."

New Committee Formed

He said that opponents of the war were coming here to demonstrate a feeling of betrayal and would continue street protests until progress was made.

Formation of a committee of Democratic party officials that also seeks an end to the war and an open convention was announced here yesterday by Senator George McGovern of South Dakota, chairman of the committee.

The committee includes several backers of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy for President. A strong platform plank on ending the war in Vietnam will be sought at the convention.

Among those who met with Mr. McGovern at O'Hare Inn to plan the work of the committee were Jesse Unruh, Speaker of the California Assembly; Gov. Philip J. Hoff of Vermont, Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island and Gov. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa.

Governor Hughes was also named yesterday to head a Commission on Democratic Selection of Presidential Nominees to propose rules to the convention for settling disputes in the Credentials and Rules Committees this year and procedures for electing delegates in the future.
